Hi [REDACTED],

I'm in China until Friday and then I go to India until this Monday so I can only get emails but not texts, until then. Hey, on my 14 hour flight to Beijing, I thought that I'd "take a page out of your book", thinking that some of your discipline rubbed off on me, and skip some of the meals but I only skipped one. I've decided I need a 24 hour "[REDACTED] hotline" to talk me through these life hurdles.

[REDACTED], I have also thought of the following. I watch a lot of movies and the tall, beautiful, brainy, Russian woman is usually a secret agent who must kill the man. The fact that your parents were in the intelligence services does nothing to mitigate this concern. I will ask that you don't kill me, but if you must, then I want a kiss before you do it, just like in all of the movies that I watch.

OK, everything above was only a joke. Let's see if I have anything serious to say. OK: how are things? How is your exercise routine? Will you travel soon?

Below is the revised version of the song I wrote for class, that I said I would send.

Assignment: Song #1, "I Remember America"
Gotham Writers
By Gregory Hold

I remember America, what used to be.
It was morning time from sea to shining sea.
Exuberance in the air, no impossibility.

Reagonomics won the cold war, restored esprit de corp.
Now we love the takers and drive the makers offshore.
We want all for free, no self-responsibility.
I wish it were again like the 1980's.

The world was with the USSR.
With Reagan's sunny optimism and 9th inning homers,
Eastern Europe, India, 10724

Like yourself for who you are.

The end of the Age of America, we need not see.
I want America, the way it used to be.
Before name dynasties, before the prom king Presidencies.
Before hard working you and me got punished by Washington.
Before we were in the cross hairs of every fringe group and faction.

I remember America, what used to be.
