

To: [REDACTED]
From: Jeffrey Epstein
Subject: Re: also yes On Wed, May 4, 2011 at 12:14 AM, [REDACTED] wrote:

there is a pretty neat loophole in the kyoto protocol as it relates to HFC. we couldn't do it in the USA but with less than a 25M investment you could make 1 billion in a year. pretty neat. china is the only currently currently exploiting the loop hole and everyone is pissed off but nothing can be changed. we would have to find a country that would let us build a stupid refrigerant plant (that wouldn't actually need distribution etc) where we would create hfc 23 only to destroy it by flaming. flaming is super cheap. it would be super fun. i was thinking that since you knew the president of senegal and he doesn't care about controversy it might be fun. the other place we could try is angola. what do you think? look it up