Hi Jeffery,

Thanks for the questions,

We are social animals and have a whole hormonal system which needs to be activated by touch. We also live in a dominance and social hierarchy and these are important for the smooth functioning of the psychology. Not only the psychological side but also the physical side, we are imbedded in a structured environment and many factors eg the 24 hour light and dark cycle, are embedded in our bodily rhythms. So we are creatures of our environment and isolation from it, (Unless one is a bear in hibernation and specially adapted) will bring some bodily and mental dysfunction. Remember sensory isolation destroys your mental world.

We are all in Monaco now for three days any chance of seeing you? Alain tells me that you have considerable publicity!

Will be in contact on my return, is there a possibility of seeing you in Paris, since you don't come to London?

Best wishes,

Peter

peter, most researchers study one brain at a time. a kidney cell unless surrounded by other similar cells kills itself. . why does a person in solitary confinement go crazy , if the individual was independnet of other similar organzims around it. . solitary confinement as opposed to hermitage. should have no effect if there werent nec connections severed. ? thoughts?

Hello Jeffrey

Alain has just told me that I haven't replied to an email of yours. That's because I haven't received one - the last one I have from you is on 4th October, from [REDACTED] confirming that we will Skype that day.

So if there's a missing one, could you re-send it?

Many thanks!
Peter
