Connect to Christ & One Another

I had a history of finding myself in "loud" churches, but I decided to visit PCPC because some of the customers I serve at my job. They attended Park Cities Presbyterian Church and were all so wonderful. Tommy Obenchain, Nathan Schubert, Campbell Lewis, Angie Iles, and the list could go on. I think those four families could get nearly anyone through the doors. I was shocked by how much I enjoyed worshiping at PCPC for the first time.

Worship was quiet, restful, peaceful; a different kind of Sabbath than I knew.

I had never done a private confession before, or followed a liturgy, at least not one that was written out and handed to me. Worship was quiet, restful, peaceful; a different kind of Sabbath than I knew. The church complimented my six days of being the loud, outgoing, extroverted girl. I thought, spoke, and moved at a much faster pace than this place. On my second Sunday, I went to the New Members' Class. Then I joined other young adults in the Ambassadors Sunday Morning Community. I am currently a member of PCPC's Pegasus Fellowship, an intentional learning community for growing in Christ and deepening in one's vocation, calling, as a follower of Jesus in the world. These communities, as an expression of the church, have greatly impacted my work and life.

I have the greatest job, I think, in the world. Recently, I was talking to my boss about a book I read in Pegasus called Every Good Endeavor by Tim Keller. We discussed vision and purpose within our company, and I illustrated what that means for me as a believer. They were intrigued and agreed to read the book. At Ambassadors, we recently talked about a community being "high grace and high truth." The following day, I sat down with another one of my bosses, and they explained a new teaching strategy. I told them it sounded like a lot of grace and no truth. "We need truth otherwise we won't learn," I said. "We'll never get better at our jobs." I connected the parallels of the Christian faith and the way we teach, train, and serve at our company.

*It is truly all because of Christ.
We wouldn't fight for our friendship, if we didn't know Christ.*

On a different but complementary note, I have shared about this journey of faith with my best friend. As far as I know, she was agnostic and at one point claimed to identify the most with Hinduism. We've talked about what I've learned and how I've grown through PCPC and Pegasus. The other night, we were talking on the phone about a conflict that a friend and I resolved. She asked, "How do you two always work it out?" I said, "It is truly all because of Christ. We wouldn't fight for our friendship, if we didn't know Christ." She asked numerous questions, and I told her about how God is relational. She was blown away. After another series of questions, she stopped and said, "I have to change my whole life." To which I responded, "Yes, you do."

I am honored to be a part of all the work that the Lord has done and is doing in my life. It feels like we're on a long drive, and I'm in the passenger seat. When He stops, I just unlock the door. I'm grateful to be along for the ride.
